Opinion

Title: Impact assessment / Transparency of interest representation activities on behalf of third countries

Overall opinion: POSITIVE WITH RESERVATIONS

(A) Policy context

The issue of influence by third countries in the European democratic space and elections has long been on the EU agenda. In terms of third country interest representation, there is currently regulatory fragmentation with more than half of the Member States regulating the activity, with different scope, diverging obligations, supervision structures and sanctions. As a result, service providers face uneven compliance costs and barriers to operate across borders, which in turn may lead to forum shopping and regulatory arbitrage.

This initiative aims to ensure the proper functioning of the interest representation services market within the EU and to regulate the transparency of third country interest representation.

(B) Summary of findings

The Board notes the additional information provided and commitments to make changes to the report.

However, the report still contains significant shortcomings. The Board gives a positive opinion with reservations because it expects the DG to rectify the following aspects:

- (1) The report does not provide a clear narrative explaining that the initiative focuses on transparency and proper functioning of interest representation services on behalf of third countries in the EU internal market.
- (2) The report does not sufficiently elaborate mitigation measures regarding potential circumvention of the transparency requirements of interest representation.

This opinion concerns a draft impact assessment which may differ from the final version.

(C) What to improve

(1) The report should provide a coherent and unambiguous narrative for this initiative focusing on legal interest representation services on behalf of third countries in the internal market of EU. The assessment should more precisely identify the gaps this initiative intends to fill and how it articulates with the wider set of initiatives on the defence of democracy. The report should provide a clear scope for the EU action, especially in terms of activities and organisations to be regulated. It should make it clear that the initiative covers legal activities.

(2) The analysis should bring out more clearly the key policy choices of the policy options. The report should better explain how the various measures would work in practice. The assessment should better articulate the mitigation measures regarding potential issues of ‘stigmatisation’ of legitimate representation activities. It should elaborate in more detail on measures to avoid potential circumvention of the transparency rules for third country interest representation taking into account that “core funding” of relevant actors is not per se in scope of this initiative.

(3) The impacts of the different policy options should be adequately differentiated, in particular as regards a realistic evaluation of the degree of take up of the various policy measures in case of a recommendation. The report should better explain how the potential sanctions would work and how effective they could be.

(4) The report should describe in greater detail the considered governance structure, and how it would work to ensure appropriate implementation and enforcement. It should explain what new elements and structures would be developed and who would be responsible for, e.g., IT tools (including registers), governance structure, supervisory bodies, annual reports, etc. It should further clarify how the national supervisory authorities would operate, and how cooperation among Member States would be structured. Finally, it should better explain the role of the Commission in this governance structure.

Some more technical comments have been sent directly to the author DG.

(D) Conclusion

The DG must revise the report in accordance with the Board’s findings before launching the interservice consultation.

If there are any changes in the choice or design of the preferred option in the final version of the report, the DG may need to further adjust the attached quantification tables to reflect this.
