The media churns out attacks on Roma, equalizing Roma with crime
The stories cite police sources
The timing is surprisingly coincidental with the discussions on longterm Roma strategy

The reported crimes is petty economic If anything it is driven by poverty and not by the greedy motives behind large "Danish" crimes and the international drugs and trafficking

Without knowledge and insight into police and intelligence operations it is difficult to gauge why police and media are so reluctant to target the really dangerous organized crime but an indication from the utilisation by TAX officers of body guards in court, the unit that also confiscate the weak and unarmed Polish EU citizen's polish registered cars indicate that police and SKAT are really afraid of these groups and therefore prefer to chalk up big statistics on soft targets

The part conclusion is that Roma figure as an important element of the police and political media strategy in Denmark and that this role blocks for the development of a national Roma strategy

Other media reports document that the problems of the "normal" everyday "integrated" and non-criminal Roma, the vast majority of the Roma in Denmark, 15-20.000 according to CIA world factbook, remain unresolved

It is about occupational medicine, job content development etc

Other reports on bi-lingual school performance indicates development of a huge new underclass, and politicians appear to deliberately set aside research showing what needs to be done, as the research is already available but politicians argue they are more clever than the researchers

There is therefore a need for a longterm national Roma strategy that can address these issues and influence the priorities to ensure better use of the public resources
